What You See

32 0 1

Chapter 1 by Magnolia

From afar you can see a girl who is a little too shy to talk aloud in class. You can see a sweet girl who is just going about her life worrying about simple things like homework, friends, and clothes. You can see knowledge behind her eyes, potential in her actions, and happiness in her words. You can see just another high school student waiting to go out into the open world.

But if you step closer, you can see bags under her eyes, carefully covered up with make up. You can see a girl who is afraid of being judged and criticized. You can see fear in her eyes when talking to anyone and shaking in her small voice. You can see a pile of jeans that are too big for her now and a bottle of prescription pills in her bag. And if you look even closer than that, you can see faded scars below her palms. You can see just another high school student waiting to go out into the open world.

Hello. My name is Victoria Lane and this is my story.
